Abstract

A method for switching over between at least two operating modes of a processor unit, having at least two execution units,

5   wherein a change from a first operating mode to a second operating mode is triggered by the processor unit accessing a predefined memory address.

Figure 1